Gurgaon: People from Gurgaon, the capital of Uttarakhand, have joined hands to download films from the internet, and have started a new online film festival called Amita Amita.. The festival will also be open to the whole of the state of Uttarakhand. "It's a chance for us to show to everyone at once how far we can go in terms of providing a true representation of what I call Indian cinema in a modern country and Indian cinema within the context of the bigger Indian cinema.. The festival has been launched to give attention to different Indian films. It is also designed to show the Indian cinema, Pramod said. In addition, he said, many films that are not being made any more will also also be given attention on the festival. "Now is the perfect time to introduce new films that might have never made it into the Indian cinema before. This is not something they could have given up a decade ago - this is something that India would have to embrace," he added.. (ANI) The Telugu community on Wednesday protested against the release of Hindi film 'Tamil' in Telugu films' market due to its religious content. The film, directed by Rajiv Kapoor and released through Sony in 2010, includes a scene of a Hindu priest and his dog being tortured and killed at gunpoint by a Muslim fanatic. The Telugu film and TV channel Telugu News said in a statement the film "has a very strong religion component." "Hindus are shown torturer/dog killer and the priest has been branded a terrorist by the Muslim community, which should be questioned, the statement adds. The TV channel said "Tamil" is being distributed in Telugu and English-language films across a broad cross section of the Telugu community, where it had not appeared before. It also expressed satisfaction over the recent success of the film, claiming that viewers have taken to social media "to share their views.""After reviewing our content guidelines, we have decided that Telugu movies, as well as Bollywood and Televised entertainment, will not be produced in our cinemas under any of our brands. We will not permit any movie from any of our brands. So much so that our distribution platforms are being hacked by those who are trying to take advantage of our culture," the statement said. The Telugu channel said "Tamil" should not have been released as it "was not a religious film on any view."When you make your first purchase at Costco and you're unsure of your brand of protein you might think it's not something important.
